Professional Sculling.

From the Cincinnati Times-Star.

It is hard for the younger generation of Americans to realize that there ever was a time when the professional sculling race was one of the popular forms of sport in this sport-loving country. The younger generation never has a chance to witness such a contest and never even hears of one unless it is rowed in some foreign country.

When an Englishman wrestled the title of world's champion sculler from an Australian the other day great crowds lined the banks of the Thames. Thirty years ago similar crowds gathered to see American sculling races, and the names of Haulan, Courtney, Gaudaur, Hosmer, Ten Eyck and a score of others were as familiar to the public of that day as are the names of the base ball stars at the present time.

The decadence of professional sculling began when the people who patronized the sport believed that the head knock-around for the suspicion that the result of a race was more likely to be determined by the amount of money in the pockets of the contestants than by the relative merits of the contestants. The professional gambler killed the professional sculling game in this country, and he will sooner or later kill any sport in which he is given too wide a latitude.

It is true that all kinds of rowing races, except the annual college contests, have declined in popularity in the last quarter of a century, but the amateur race still finds favor in numerous cities, while the professional event, which the gamblers claimed as their own particular field for gambling, is about as dead as anything can be.

A Made-to-Order City.

From the Cincinnati Times-Star.

The United States can well be proud of the fact that an American has won the international competition for the design for the new capital city of Australia. This city is to be situated in New South Wales, about seventy miles from the coast, and is to be called Canberra. It is to be built entirely according to the plans submitted by the American.

It isn't often that a young architect has an opportunity to start with a perfectly clean slate and plan a city without paying attention to streets and sewers and buildings that have preceded his work. But Walter Burley Griffin of Chicago has won the prize offered by the Australian government, and when the new capital is completed in years to come, he will have the satisfaction of seeing his plan in effect. It is a plan that is the first really great city that was actually "made to order."

The plan of Canberra is of the radial or "city center" type. There is a large principal city center from which streets and boulevards radiate to other centers. From these in turn still other thoroughfares radiate to subordinate centers in the suburbs. The competition, which was announced a year or more ago, was entered by big architects in various countries, but Mr. Griffin's work pleased the judges and filled the requirements better than any other submitted. The plan is said to be complete in every detail, covering not only the public buildings and thoroughfares, but including all the hidden necessities such as sewers, light conduits, water mains and street and railroad.

In years to come globe-trotting Americans will doubtless feel more than an ordinary thrill as they drive when they enter Canberra, for they will realize that the city was first born as an idea in the brain of an American, and then worked out by a big country on the other side of the world.

HEARING IS DELAYED

McCleary Recommended to Jail for Three Days.

AUTOPSY TO BE HELD

Mrs. Henry's Body Will Be Examined and Examined Tomorrow.

ALL EVIDENCE IS SOUGHT

State Not to Rely Solely on Alleged Confession of Young Man

Held for Murder.

Special Dispatch to The Star.

HAGERSTOWN, Md., August 28.—Norman Bruce McCleary, who is said to have confessed to murdering Mrs. Nannie B. Henry in Hagerstown the night of August 15, was today recommitted to jail for three days. He will not be given a preliminary hearing until after the autopsy on the body of Mrs. Henry. It was planned to perform this autopsy this afternoon, but at the last moment there was a shift in the plans of the state. In order to avoid the annoyance of the crowd that had been on hand during the morning, in the hope of obtaining a glimpse of the accused, McCleary was taken from the jail to the police station, but instead Justice Daniel W. Doub, the committing magistrate, went to the jail and recommitted the prisoner.

McCleary seemed in good spirits and more at ease than at any time since his incarceration. It was commented by those who saw him that he did not have the appearance of an insane man.

Autopsy Tomorrow.

State's Attorney Wolfinger stated today that it had been definitely decided to have the autopsy performed tomorrow. Dr. Brannan, assistant coroner, physician of Baltimore, will be in charge, assisted by Dr. Peregrine Wroth of Hagerstown.

At first State's Attorney Wolfinger was inclined to refuse the request of Wagonman & Wagonman, counsel for the accused, permission to be represented at the autopsy, but today he notified them that the state would permit it.

Dr. W. D. Campbell, Dr. J. Royer Laughlin and Dr. S. M. Wagonman will be the physicians present representing the prisoner. Aside from the five physicians, State's Attorney Wolfinger, Chief of Police Fredinger and Wagonman & Wagonman, if they desire, will be present.

Will Take Up Body.

Andrew K. Coffman, funeral director of Hagerstown, will early tomorrow morning go to the cemetery at Clear Spring, nine miles west of Hagerstown, where the remains of Mrs. Henry are buried, and take up the hermetically sealed metallic casket and place it upon a platform ready for the physicians.

When the body was buried it was covered with formaldehyde and wrapped in cotton at the instance of the state, this step being taken in anticipation of a possible autopsy. Dr. Campbell, who definitely stated that when the body of Mrs. Henry was found there was a laceration on the neck, having the appearance of having been made by a finger nail.

The purpose of the autopsy is to secure further evidence, such as the condition of the lungs and marks about the neck.

It is regarded as highly probable that the preliminary hearing will take place in Hagerstown immediately upon the return of the physicians and officers from the autopsy, so as not to detain Dr. Brannan here longer than necessary.

Plenty of Evidence.

States Attorney Wolfinger stated to The Star correspondent today that the type-written copy of the confession made by McCleary, and which is witnessed by a half dozen persons, would not likely be made public until the grand jury meets in November. The state attorney says the state has ample testimony to hold the accused for court without his confession. While the latter bears out the theory held by the state officers from the start, the proposed backing up this confession by every bit of testimony to be had.

Counsel for McCleary will leave no stone unturned in his defense.

Gasoline Intoxicated.

From the St. Louis Republic.

The town of Covina, Cal., reports the case of a young girl who has formed the habit of inhaling gasoline fumes until she becomes dizzy and loses consciousness. She has inherited her condition as that of "gasoline intoxication."

Here is not an isolated case. There are a good many thousands of girls who are mostly adult. The symptoms are unmistakable. There is a strained look in the victim's eyes. The fingers itch for the steering wheel and the speed clutch.

The craving for the fumes of gasoline puts mortgages on homes. It stretches incomes to the point where they can stretch no more and the inevitable financial crash follows. Among other things it makes victims strangers to their own homes. It has a way, too, of manipulating bank accounts till they show a balance on the wrong side of the books.

Gasoline intoxication is further characterized by an almost insane disregard for the rights of the inebriate's fellow-man and the common laws of safety. There are times when it is as dangerous to the public as the madness caused by cocaine.

The speeder and the joy rider suffer from gasoline intoxication superinduced by high-speed races and competition by speed mania. The treatment indicated is total abstinence at hard manual labor.
